

THEATER ARTS, MFA

Degree: Master of Fine Arts (MFA)

Field of Study: Theater Arts

Program Overview

In 1996, Case Western Reserve University and Cleveland Play House joined forces to create a Master of Fine Arts program in Theater Arts. The MFA is a terminal professional degree, and candidacy for the program requires an undergraduate degree, some theatrical experience, or demonstrable potential for work at the graduate level. In addition, candidates must provide evidence of technical skill and creative ability through the audition process.

At the end of each semester in residence, each student's progress is evaluated. Only students who have clearly demonstrated growth and excellence are permitted to remain in the program. The award of the MFA degree is contingent upon the student's academic progress and upon the assessment on the part of the faculty that the candidate possesses the potential to work in the field of theater on a professional level.
